

Document D — Announcement Bullets

Exercise 2, Round 4 (Expand). Fictional. Meridian Technical Services.

Turn these bullet points into an internal announcement to all field staff.

Then read your memo line by line and mark every sentence you could not personally sign — every claim that isn't in these bullets, every number that appeared from nowhere, every commitment nobody authorised.

Notes for an announcement — from the Operations Director

- Pre-job briefing is staying. It is not being withdrawn.
 - We have read all 40 survey responses.
 - Changes we are making:
 - The briefing is being built into the job card system, so it is one system and one sign-off rather than two. Target is end of Q4. Not confirmed yet — the change request goes to the systems board on 3 September.
 - Offline mode is being added so it works at outstations without signal. This is in development.
 - Point 4 is being reworded. The current wording is ambiguous and answers to it are not comparable. Existing responses to point 4 will not be used for analysis.
 - Proper training is being arranged, in person, by crew. Dates not yet set.
 - Things we are not changing, and why:
 - The briefing itself stays as nine points. Two of them have already caught live plant this quarter.
 - Sign-off by every team member stays. The record has to show who was present.
 - One thing we need to say clearly: some people are completing the briefing before arriving on site. That has to stop. The record then says something that isn't true. We understand the time pressure that causes it and we are fixing the time pressure — but the practice stops now, not when the fix lands.
 - We are not going to pretend the extra time isn't real. It is. We think it is worth it and here is what we are doing to reduce it.
 - Questions to the operations mailbox. We will publish answers to the common ones rather than replying individually.

End of notes.
